Inclusion North News

My name is Karen Parry and I am Chief Executive of Inclusion North.

This extra news bulletin is to let you know that I will be leaving my job at the end of the year.

Some of you might know that I have not been very well lately. I was so unwell that I had to take the whole of July off sick.

I am back at work now, but I'm not feeling totally better. I'm still really tired and I'm struggling to get all my work done.

It has been a really hard decision but the best thing for me and my health is to stop working for a bit.

The job of Chief Executive is really busy and it takes a lot of energy.

Inclusion North deserves to have a Chief Executive who can be here all the time and bring fresh new energy and ideas to the company.

By the time I leave at the end of December I will have worked at Inclusion North for 8 years.

I have worked with some fabulous people and been involved in lots of exciting, creative work.

I have loved working at Inclusion North and the next person to become our Chief Executive will be very lucky because it is a brilliant job.

This will be an exciting opportunity for whoever the new Chief Executive is. Inclusion North is a great company to work for and we have got lots of exciting work to deliver over the next few years.

The Board of Directors are thinking about what they need to do to find a new Chief Executive. We will tell you more about this as the plans progress.

In the meantime I am still here and doing my job.

We just wanted to let everyone know, so nobody worries about what is happening.
